

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for detecting errors in a memory includes generating a first check word based on incoming data and generating a second check word based on stored data. The 5 method includes comparing the first check word to the second check word, generating a comparison result, and indicating a failure based on the comparison result.